

I am a Flight Attendant. I am opposed to cell phone use during flight for safety, security and public decency concerns.

There is no definitive evidence that the use of T-PED's (transmitting portable electronic devices) does NOT interfere with airplane navigational and communications equipment. There are studies that show T-PED's do in fact cause interference with essential navigational equipment such as ILS landing system, VOR systems and compass.

Allowing the use of T-PED's would help terrorists communicate with each other on board to coordinate an hijacking or set off explosive devices.

During flight, using T-PEDS is not appropriate. Common courtesy dictates that places such as church, theatres, hospitals that cell phones are not allowed. The use of cell phones can cause possible disruption, increase noise level, create more air rage.

I am requesting the FCC to withdraw the notice of proposed rulemaking for usage of cell phones in flight.
